

Invitation to Authors: Journal of Medicinal Chemistry Perspective Series

The Perspective series of the Journal of Medicinal Chemistry is designed to provide an enlightened appraisal of a field of research in which recognized experts review the state-of-the-art for a given area or therapeutic target. Authors have some editorial freedom to express their perspective on the strategic directions of the field of research. As such, the Perspective series is a forum that achieves high visibility within the pharmaceutical industry and academia.

We are attempting to identify topics and authors for high-quality manuscripts to ensure that a Perspective article is published in every issue. We would like the series to be useful to a broad range of scientists interested in the design, discovery and development of novel medicines. We invite you to submit an idea for a Perspective, along with a brief outline of what you will cover in the manuscript. We also welcome your input regarding potential topics of interest and authors for Perspective manuscripts. Please direct correspondence or calls regarding the series to:
